

Gift to Spohn aids nursing students

A strong, cooperative association between CCSU and Spohn Hospital has, through the years, been a catalyst for continuing professional education, and now a generous donation of $15,000 to the Spohn Development Foundation will mean scholarship opportunities for 29 graduate and undergraduate nursing students at CCSU this semester.

The gift, from an anonymous donor, will provide $500 scholarship awards to each of these students enabling them to continue their professional education. "Spohn Hospital is grateful to the benefactor," said Sister Kathleen Coughlin, the hospital's chief executive officer. "This gift and commitment to train and educate insure that Spohn's tradition of quality care will continue."

Spohn Hospital has been an advocate of the educational health care activities of the University since the early '70s. Close ties exist in both nursing and medical technology training. Annually, the hospital hosts dozens of interns.

"Corpus Christi State University recognizes the special educational needs of our area's health care providers," said CCSU President Robert R. Furgason. "That is why we are working to expand our services. Our programs, and the students that work through them, are paramount to meeting the health care needs of South Texas. This generous gift further enhances our strong collaboration with Spohn Hospital to meet our citizens' health needs."

Recipients of this most recent scholarship award represent a cross-section of the professionals employed in Spohn's Patient Care. See "Spohn," page 4.

Stu. Senate adds nine

CCSU Student Government officially has nine new members: seven student senators and two student senate alternates. At last Monday's (Oct. 7) meeting, the newly elected members of the Student Senate were sworn into office.

Following the swearing in, Acting Senate Speaker Joyce Turner announced the passage of the constitutional amendment "by overwhelming majority." That amendment dissolved her position, merging its duties and powers with that of the Student Body President.

Turner followed with a ceremonial transfer of power, turning the gavel over to Student Body President Shelly Beckett.

New Student Senators include: Rodolfo "Rudy" Laurel Jr. representing the College of Business Administration; Bruce Buchanan, Tony De La Rosa, Bill Hoelscher, Richard "Ricky" King and Richard Olmos representing the College of Education; and Joseph Dubeau representing the College of Science and Technology. ## Graduation voting set

One, two or three; with or without? That was the question posed to Student Government last Monday (Oct. 7) regarding possible changes in the number and configuration of CCSU graduation ceremonies.

Joyce Turner, former acting student senate speaker, presented a memorandum from Dr. Jennifer Prouty, chair of the Faculty Senate's Academic Affairs Committee, which requested Student Senate input on six possible options for CCSU graduation ceremonies. "In a recent proposal, the Academic Affairs Committee was asked to consider eliminating several graduation ceremonies and receptions per year to save money," writes Prouty, an associate professor of geology. "...The Committee agrees that omission of one or two graduation ceremonies and receptions annually would save the university a significant amount of money... Since we felt the graduation ceremony is important to students, we did not wish to make recommendations to the Faculty Senate without first receiving input from the Student Senate."

Student Body President Shelly Beckett appointed a three member committee to study the issue and bring back recommendations for the approval of the Student Senate by the Oct. 21 meeting. The Academic Affairs Committee is requesting Student Senate recommendations by Nov. 1, 1991.

Student committee members James Beggs, Ricky King and Rick Olmos decided to present the options to the student body at large. See "Graduation," page 4.

Cooperation, events mark ed. week

Americans place a significantly greater emphasis on higher education as a major factor in getting a job or advancing in a career than they did five years ago, according to a new national survey.

At the same time, the public's support for federal funding of student aid has increased over the past five years, along with its perception of the financial burden associated with getting a college degree.

The results come from a survey conducted by The Gallup Organization for the Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) as part of National Higher Education Week, October 13-19.

According to the survey, Americans look to higher education and business to develop new technologies that will make America more competitive in the marketplace. One-third (35 percent) believe businesses and corporations should lead the way in this area with equivalent proportions (34 percent) looking to higher education institutions.

Several examples of successful business-education partnerships can be cited locally, including the recent scholarship program set up for 29 CCSU nursing students through the Spohn Development Foundation. (See story above.)

Several local and campus activities are planned that will lend support to public awareness of higher education issues. Today (October 14) the State Commissioner of Education, Dr. Lionel "Skip" Meno will be the keynote speaker at a luncheon sponsored in part by the Corpus Christi Chamber of Commerce. The CCSU Bilingual Education Student Organization has served to coordinate reservations and ticket sales. For ticket information, contact Melanie Dominguez at 994-2699.

A formal announcement regarding the Bay Area Consortium for Education Excellence will be made at the meeting. Many CCSU faculty members have been involved in See "Higher Ed," page 4.

Beta Beta Beta, the biological honor society, requested and received $400 to be used to assemble and publish "A Field Guide to Ward Island," designed to be an "assemblage of plant and animal life indigenous to Ward Island" according to the group's funding request.

The CCSU SCUBA Club was awarded $400 to help finance an educational dive trip to South Padre Island for its members to learn about the ecology of that area.

Alpha Kappa Delta chapter begins

The CCSU sociology department received approval this year to establish a chapter of Alpha Kappa Delta, the honorary fraternity for students in sociology. AKD is an international sociology honor society founded in 1920. It is a non-secret, democratic society of scholars dedicated "to investigate humanity for the purpose of service." Its mission is to promote the study of sociology, research of social problems and other activities that will lead to improvement in the human condition.

To be eligible for membership a student must be an officially declared sociology major or demonstrate serious interest in sociology by having completed at least four courses, be at least of junior standing, and have a four-year cumulative overall GPA of 3.0 and a 3.0 GPA in sociology courses taken at CCSU prior to initiation.

Among the 372 AKD chapters in the United States, 26 are in Texas. CCSU's chapter is Psi of Texas.

A banquet and initiation was held Friday, Oct. 11, at which Provost/Vice President Tito Guerrero was the speaker. Guests included Dean Paul Hain and Chair, Division of Humanities and Social Sciences David Mead. Charter members recognized for their excellent scholarship record, both in general and in sociology, and initiated at that time were: Patricia R. Harlan, Sonya Nannette Hicks, Joyce D. Kelner, Pamela S. Melton, Adriana D. Salazar, Kelli J. Wehrwein

Cinema views Dreamland

University Cinema offers another trio of documentary films this Wednesday (Oct. 16) with the screening of O Dreamland, Every Day Except Christmas, and Thursday's Children. Next Wednesday's (October 23) film presentation will include Happy Mother's Day and

The Chair. Both showings begin at 7:30 p.m. in Warren Theatre and are free and open to the public.

O Dreamland (1953, 15 min.) contrasts the nightmare world of tawdry distractions at an amusement park with the apathetic search of its motley group of pleasure-seekers.

Every Day Except Christmas (1957, 40 min.) is a film about London's Convent Garden Market, a chronological account of the way flowers and produce arrive at the market, are displayed and sold.

In Thursday's Children (1953, 20 min.), director Lindsay Anderson turns from his previous work with industrial subjects to a documentary about the education of deaf children. The limitations of primitive sound equipment are turned into aesthetic assets as sound and silence are interwoven to involve the viewer in the world of a classroom for the deaf.

On October 23, Happy Mother's Day (1963, 52 min.) finds filmmakers Richard Leacock and Joyce Chopra looking at how the 1963 birth of the Fischer children affected their hometown, Aberdeen, South Dakota, not to mention their mother, Mrs. Fischer.

In The Chair (1962, 56 min.), lawyer Louis Nizer fights to save a condemned black man from the electric chair in this Robert Drew documentary.

Hispanic heritage meet Tues.

A cultural celebration of Hispanic heritage and identity will take place on campus Tuesday (Oct. 15) as The Peace Center and a host of sponsors bring local Hispanic leaders to campus as part of Hispanic Heritage Month.

The afternoon event will begin at 12:30 p.m. with live music provided by Estudiantina Cristo Rey under the direction of Dr. Leo Carrillo, professor of Hispanic studies. The musical interlude will be followed at 1 p.m. with a panel presentation featuring Clotilde Garcia, M.D.; Victor Lara Ortega, news director for KUNO radio; and Oscar Flores, president of the Westside Business Association. CCSU President Dr. Robert Furgason will preside as master of ceremonies.

"This project is an attempt at building bridges between the University community and the community at large," stated Peace

Center Secretary Leslie Jarmon.

"We were looking for successful role models for students," explained Jarmon, discussing the panel selection process. "We are asking the panelists to address three questions: who were their role models and why; what role did being bilingual play in their career, both good and bad; and what recommendations can they make about achieving career success."

Additional sponsors include Dr. Maria Elena Villarreal, Dr. Veronica Guerra and the College of Arts & Humanities Special Events and Programs Committee. Admission is free, and the campus community and general public are invited to attend.

Always watch that first step...

"I can't move. My feet won't move," gasped CCSU nursing student and ROTC cadet Kim Roeder. Concentration and apprehension etched furrows in her brow as she tried back-stepping over the ledge of the sixty-foot fire tower. Sweat from sun, exertion and fear beaded her forehead, running down her temples before she made that final commitment to go over the edge. Yet as she stepped onto the side of the building, with half-a-football-field of air below her, Roeder smiled.

"It's that first step," stated Roeder, smiling and joking back on terra firma. "Those first two steps over the edge are tough. It's like your feet are glued to that ledge. Once you get over the edge, it's easy. It's fun."

Roeder was one of twenty-five cadets from the joint CCSU-Del

Mar ROTC unit who participated in the rappelling exercises held Sept. 26 at the fire tower located at Staples and Weber.

"That's a normal reaction," said Captain Robert Pierce, assistant professor of military science and ROTC at CCSU, explaining Roeder's reaction to the rappelling exercise. "The first time the cadets are apprehensive, but after they start (down the side of the building) it's a piece of cake."

According to Pierce, rappelling is held twice annually. "The idea is to build confidence early in the fall semester, explained Pierce. "Once the cadets overcome their initial fear, they approach other projects with more confidence. We hold the exercise later in the spring semester to prepare cadets for Advance Camp where they will again face the challenge of rappelling."

beginning at 1 p.m. Registration for the tournament is underway and will continue through Wednesday (Oct. 16) at the Field House.

the best punt and the best pass, with David Quinn winning for the best kick at 100 feet, 5 inches. The contest was based on both distance and accuracy.

to help offset the cost of their Fall Scholarship Award/Initiation Banquet while The Peace Center now has $100 to help them promote upcoming Center events which will include "guest speakers covering a broad spectrum of issues of interest. All Center events are open to the public and are free," according to the group's request.

The Student Art Association received $400 to help finance a field trip to Houston Nov. 1-2, 1991, to see the works of Rauschenberg at the Menil Collection. SAA President Denise Serafini announced at the meeting the field trip is open to all students, not just SAA members or art majors.

Texas Student Education Association was awarded $400 to offset the cost of two TSEA events: the District IV Convention in Edinburg on Nov. 2 where CCSU's Dr. Diana Bentschneider, assistant professor of education, will present a workshop, and the Critical Issues state meeting in Austin scheduled for Nov. 15-17.

With a total of $3,000 in the initial Fall funding pot, Tuesday's voting leaves $770 remaining, funds which Director of Student Life Sara Winston informed the group could be made available to campus organizations through another funding meeting process this semester.

At the Oct. 1 regular UCSS meeting, Winston announced

CCSU had changed its catering policy which until recently required all catered campus events to be served by University Food Services. Because student organizations cannot always afford Food Service prices, informed Winston, the new policy will allow student organizations to obtain off-campus catering as long as CCSU's Food Services is allowed to bid on the event first.

During the same meeting, UCSS members voted 5-4 to dispense with their "free lunch." Winston had reported to the group that providing members with complimentary lunches averaged some $75 per meeting. Discussion of optional uses for the "freed" funds included establishment of a student newspaper or bringing in speakers.

The next UCSS meeting is scheduled for Oct 22 at 12:15 p.m. in GMSC Conf. Rm. 2.

by sponsoring a student poll to be held this Monday through Thursday, Oct. 14-17. Ballots outline the six options articulated by the Faculty Senate committee and request each student to pick only their first and second choice by numbering the options No. 1 and No. 2.

Ballot boxes, according to the committee, will be located in Corpus Christi Hall, Glasscock Memorial Student Center, Center for the Arts, Center for the Sciences, Classroom East and possibly the Library. While students will not be required to sign the ballot, indicated the committee, they will need to include their social security number for verification purposes.

The proposed options are included in the box (at left) which can be cut out and used as an official ballot by any CCSU student.

According to Prouty's memo, each graduation/reception costs about $5000 in documented costs such as facility rentals, equipment, food, musicians, etc. and "perhaps up to $10,000 including undocumented costs" such as employee compensation time. "The reception itself may cost about $2000," continued Prouty.

"CCSU graduates about 1000 students per year; the August graduation is the lightest."

Beggs, Olmos and King researched this past year's graduation figures and reported that 290 students were eligible for graduation during the summer of 1990, followed by a Fall 1990 graduating class of 355, a Spring 1991 graduation of 365 students and a Summer 1991 graduation of 290.

Additional research revealed that the Bayfront Plaza Auditorium, which seats about 2,500, has been rented for previous graduation ceremonies for $935 without a reception or $1535 including reception rental costs. Memorial Coliseum, which can seat up to 5,000, rents for approximately $1100, reports the triad.

The three member committee stated they would base their recommendations to the Student Senate on the results of the student graduation opinion poll.
